DEATH OF ADMIRAL COURBET Vice-Admiral Courbet, the Commander-in-Chief of the French fleet in the Far East, died rather suddenly on board his flagship, the Bayard, at Makung, at 11 p.m. on Thursday. deceased Commander had been very ill with fever some two months ago, but had recovered; and it was only two days before his death that he was again seized with the same malady, to which he rapidly succumbed on this occasion.

The deceased officer, who was 58 years of age. had spent a very active life in the French nava service. He had been noted for his energy, daring, and his uniform success. At the time he was sent out to this station, during the French conquest of Tonquin, he was regarded by his Government and by the country generally as one of the ablest officers connected with the French Navy, and his death will be felt as a severe loss to the nution. Though very strict in the enforcement of discipline. Admiral Courbet was beloved by the men their entire confidence. As he was trusted by his subordinates, he was feared by the Chinese, who had a high opinion of his courage

For the safety of the troops there he was obliged to keep a large portion of his flast off the town, and those who know the unsheltered nature of the roadstead and the nature of the weather there will agree in thinking him most fortunate in suffering no casualty to his ships. The attack on Tameri was not under his command; possibly if it had been it would have been managed differently, with porhaps a the attempt would not have been snade. Adv

It is to be regretted that after so much good service Admiral Courbet should not have been able to return home to enjoy his honours, but should have fallen a viotim to disease at the Island scene of his latest success.

Mr. Cowie has obtained from the Sultan of Brunei on favourable terms the right, for 40 years dating from March, 1882, of working all the coal in the district lying between Nosong Point, the southern boundary of Kimanis Bay, and the Tutong river, near the northern boundary of Sarawak. This comprises the whole of what may be called Brunei Bay. Within this limit conlis already known to exist at Batu Batu in the Limbang and Brunei rivers and at Muara, which is situated, as its name implies, at the entrance of the Brunei river. . It is at this latter place-Muara-that Mr. Cowie has commenced to appropriate to themselves what the secretary working. There is an excellent anchorage with hor 6 fathoms of water, formed by the mainland on which the mines are situated and by a small island also fiamed Musra. The least water, at low tides, leading into this anchorage is 17 feet. Off the jetty there are 5 fathoms. The locality was recently specially surveyed by H. M. S. Magpie, Captain the Hon, Foley C. I

At Labuan Mr. Cowie has a ninety-nine years ease of 230 feet of frontage on which he has almost completed a jetty with about 16 feet of times of Edward VI, "The Prince and the water at law tide. As to the quality of the coal, the following is an extract from an official report by Mr. J. H. Lemon, R.N. engineer of H. M. S Fly, which is dated 31s May, 1883, and addressed to Captain J. Hope,

Str. - in compliance with your Memo. of the 24th board Hor Majesty's ships, I beg to report that I have carefully tried the coal and I consider it is a desirable coal for use on Her Majesty's ships.
The coal forms no clinker and very little soot, the

Tried it on the 3rd May, it being necessary to reach the anchorage before nightfull, the speed of the ship was increased, the average rate being 7.25 knots and for several hours the speed ranged from 7.5 to 7.8 To obtain this the fires were not forced nor was the reduced fire grate area; If a higher rate of spood had been desired, it could have been attained without trouble. The absence of clinkers enables a large quantity of coal to be burnt and a free supply of team to be obtained. The above favourable opinion of an expertapeaks for itself. The only quality militating against the coal is its lightness and the consequent larger stowing capacity required. This is common to all Eastern tertiary coals, and the small figure at which it can be sold as compared to that English coal in the East more than counterbalances this disadvantage. The difficulty felt in the case of the Labran coal was the small number without having to fill up the gaol with poachers, of local steamers (in fact there was, in those days, only one-the steamer Cleator) requiring coal and the expense of conveying the coal to Singapore Chinese after it. "WAR" AND A NIGHT SURPRISE change :--

The captain and crew of H.M.S. Diamond which left Adelaide a week or so ago with souled orders, have succeeded in affording an immerise amount of harmless amusement to the placed Western Australians. The Diamond arrived at King George's sound in full expectation that war had by that time been declared against Russia, and their anspicions were aroused by observ-ing that the lights in the lighthouse were burning unusually low. The English wership oxtinguished her lamps, and six boats' crows, armed to the teeth, were lowered, and swept through the waters with muffled oars toward the supposed scene of the Russian surprise. The beats completely surrounded the lighthouse; and while the party advanced silently to the landing place, the other crews remained on the watch ready to storm the place as soon as the signal was given. The gallant tars of the Diamond, who had landed on the rocks, perceived in the dim twilight an old man seated at the lighthouse door quietly smoking his ovening pipe. Auxious to capture him without giving analarm to the supposed Russian guard inside the building, the marines crept toward him on their hands and knees, and seized, gagged, and carried him to the boat. Their aged prisoner was interrogated by two of the officers, in English, but he morely stared around upon his around captors with every appearance of terror in his face, and answered never a word. The officers then tried him with French, next with the soft (P) tongue of Germany, and as a last desperate resource addressed him in the liquid (P) accents of Russia. Although they were ineff notual in cliciting a reply, the triglot torture resulted in sending the unfortunate old man into a series of alarming fits, so that it was feared he would expire in the arms of the gallant officer comm unding the boats, who had experimented upon him with Russian. When at langth the ship's surgeon had brought him to, and his companion was discovered that the aged light-keeper was a thoroughly loyal subject of the Queen; but stone deaf. He had reciprocated the Diamond's mistake by imagining that he had been captured by the Russians. The residents of Albany, and the mail passengers who bring the story, have been convulsed over it.

The old story about the size of a whale's heart is being revived. A dissector was engaged in getting out the heart of a very large whale. "To have a good-tempered sensible woman to trust in when all the butterflies, who, after all, are only caterpiliars dressed, forsake me." To men of genius a good-tempered sensible women often proves more attractive and desirable for a wife than the most beautiful butterflies of fashion and in choosing, wives men who do not passage genius might often profitably follow their ex-
